February 28, 1984

Dear Bill:

I would like to reinitiate the very successful rotational assignment of Deputy Director for Intelligence (DDI) analysts to ACDA. The two DDI analysts who served in ACDA during 1982 and 1983 made lasting contributions to our work here and, in turn, gained experience in the arms control policy formulation process that we believe will benefit their career prospects.

An equally important opportunity now exists for a DDI analyst to work with the Verification Division of our Bureau of Verification and Intelligence. This division is responsible for formulating verification policy and dealing with verification issues with respect to existing and draft treaties in support of the Administration's commitment to achieve effectively verifiable arms control treaties. The individuals who staff this division work closely with the other ACDA bureaus and in the interagency process. The individual will obtain direct knowledge of and experience in the policy process and the use of intelligence in that process.

I am sensitive to the concerns raised in earlier correspondence between you and Gene Rostow that DDI analysts neither serve as intelligence officers nor occupy a position which could complicate the existing DCI-ACDA working relationship on intelligence and compliance issues. The opportunity now existing in the verification policy area would meet both of these conditions.

In light of our continuing budgetary limitations and the value of these exchanges, I hope you will agree to reinitiate the program on a non-reimbursable basis.

Sincerely,

Kenneth L. Adelman

U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency

SUBJECT : Personnel Assigned to Arms Control Verification (U)

Reference : Memo for DCI, from D/ACDA, same subj, dtd 29 Nov 82

1. In late 1982, ACDA requested in the reference the number of professional personnel in the Intelligence Community engaged in work on arms control verification. The attached Table aggregates these numbers according to the categories set forth in the attachment to ACDA's memorandum. (U)

2. We hope this satisfies the original request. If there is anything else we may do on this, please let us know. (U)

The numbers in the Table have been derived by counting each official, who spends 75 percent of his/her time on arms control verification, as the equivalent of one man-year. Persons engaged part-time in this area are counted in tenths of man-years. Because certain individuals are professionally engaged in more than one task, this measure will provide a more accurate picture of the involvement of the Intelligence Community in arms control verification. In addition, there are substantial numbers of professional personnel involved in collection, processing, and analyzing intelligence information whose product serves several purposes, including arms control verification. The majority of these personnel would conduct their work even in the absence of verification needs and have not been included in this Table.

SUBJECT: Response to ACDA on Verification Personnel

1. Action: Sign the attached memorandum to the Acting Director, Arms Control and Disarmament Agency providing the answer to an earlier request from the previous Director. (U)

2. Background: In late 1982, the Director of ACDA asked in a memorandum (see attached copy) for the number of professional personnel assigned to arms control verification on a full time basis. (U)

3. Work on this request, though delayed because of other, more pressing issues involving intelligence support to the arms control process, has now been completed. We used the definitions provided by ACDA and added for accuracy and for completeness the requirement that personnel could be counted in tenths when appropriate. A copy of the worksheet we used is attached to this memorandum for your background and information. (U)

4. Staff Position: The numbers in the table attached to the response back to ACDA are based upon inputs from Intelligence Community elements. The memorandum to ACDA, however, has not been coordinated itself. (U)

5. Recommendation: Sign the attached memorandum. (U)

OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR

MEMORANDUM FOR:

The Secretary of State
The Secretary of Defense
The Secretary of Energy
The Director of Central Intelligence
The Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff

SUBJECT: Personnel Assigned to Arms Control Verification

Chairman Percy of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has written to me pursuant to Section 37 of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (as Amended) to request information concerning personnel engaged in arms control verification. In order to comply with this request and the statutory provision, we need to know the number of professional personnel assigned to arms control verification on a full-time basis in your respective departments and agencies.

The meaning of the phrase "professional personnel assigned to arms control verification on a full-time basis" is not defined in the statute. However, the statute and its legislative history indicate that ACDA has the responsibility to prepare a report that delineates the full scope of the verification process including the persons engaged therein. For purposes of this report, we consider the statutory language to refer to those officials whose professional functions or responsibilities in substantial part (approximately 75 percent or more) are involved in the process of determining whether parties to existing arms control agreements with the United States are complying with the terms of their obligations or whether such compliance could be determined under proposed arms control agreements.

In order to respond as fully as possible to this request, I ask that you provide a report of the professional personnel assigned to arms control verification on a full-time basis. This should include an explanation of the type of verification activity in which the reported personnel are engaged and the percentage of their total time spent on verification activities. I have attached a statement of the various activities and functions that are considered to be part of the process of verification.
